Smith-McFarland Theatre

Lord of the Flies

Adapted by Nigel Williams

From the novel by Nobel laureate William Golding

Directed by Becky Solis

Scenic and costume design by Yoshinori Tanokura

Imagine Survivor with a dark twist. William Golding's work features a group of marooned adolescents stranded on an isolated tropical island paradise. They form tribes and play games, but their games—featuring bullying, peer pressure, and gang rivalries—descend into a frightening, primitive world where the survivors must choose between reason and chaos.

Nigel Williams, who worked with Golding on the dramatic adaptation, noted that "I don't think I have ever read a book that caught the confusions and . . . delights of childhood more accurately – or one that evoked the unformed, and yet so potent, characters that dog everyone's early years with such vividness or agony. Its view of landscape, friendship, memory and – most important of all – moral and intellectual difficulty seemed as clear and powerful as Greek tragedy."

This play is appropriate for middle and high school students and adults.

General admission, $12;

Faculty/staff and senior citizens (with ID), $10;

Students (with ID), $7; Youth, $5.
