

One Book, One Campus Reading
Wednesday, October 30, 7 p.m. in Lower Dansbury

Join us for a public reading led by Dr. Alberto Cardelle, interim dean of the college of health sciences, titled “The Other Wes Moore: a community perspective.” Excerpts from the book will be read and discussed by Anthony Stevens Arroyo of the Federation of Latinos for Education about the Cultures of Hispanic America; Steven Harper of Strategic Crisis Solutions and a Candidate for School Board; and Amy Kirkwood of Pocono Health Systems and Shawnee International Health & Development. Panelists will highlight the relevance of the book’s lessons to their development as local and international community activists.

Dr. Cardelle is professor of health studies and interim dean of the college of health sciences. The discussion will be particularly interesting to students currently engaged in education, health sciences, history, political science, sociology, and cultural studies.

Thank you for supporting One Book, One Campus.
