

AHMED KARAM YOUSOF, Ph.D

Assistant Professor of Digital Media Technologies

About myself!

Throughout my four-year experience in teaching at Indiana University of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State University, I've taught different courses related to the fields of media production, writing for media, and visual literacy. Examples of such courses were: multimedia production, scriptwriting for games, and data visualization. I have also developed considerable experience in teaching theory courses such as communications media research, and introduction to media and communication. The main emphasis of my teaching assignment and research interest is mainly about the use of interactive digital storytelling (i.e. games and animation) for serious purposes such as campaigns, social justice issues, and learning.
