GRANTS

Instructional Technology Fee Grant (approximately $8,000). Wrote successful 2018 ESU proposal for photographic and videographic technology for professional writing and journalism students.

Instructional Technology Fee Grant (approximately $4,000). Wrote successful 2012 ESU proposal for iPads, cameras, and software for use by professional writing students. (iPads were delivered but changes in technology led to camera purchased being shelved.)

Monroe County/Provost Service Learning Grant, ($10,000), awarded fall 2009 for pilot funding for a new online regional magazine and information hub aimed at highlighting public service achievements in the Poconos called Pocono Good. This high-technology, high-social engagement, high-profile project aligns with many of the main themes and principles of the ESU Strategic Plan 2010-2015. It also provides a concrete working context for students in several MCOM and English classes, and it allows the two departments to pool specialized teaching skills and technological resources. Students gain in-demand job skills and local and globalized knowledge of social problems, and regional volunteer organizations and Monroe county stakeholders see just how much ESU and its community have to offer them.

Provost Instructional Resource Grant ($1,000) (two times), awarded spring 2008 and spring 2009 to bring national-level journalists to ESU for public talk and career-focused meetings with professional writing students.

Instructional Technology Fee Grant. Wrote successful ESU proposal for four Flip camcorders for use by professional writing students ($600). The camcorders have become exceptionally popular with student writers adding video to class and extracurricular projects.
